

REOPENING DURING COVID-19:

Safety & Planning Considerations

Governor Burgum is calling on businesses to approach reopening in a ND Smart fashion. A thoughtful approach is required to safely re-introduce employees and customers back into your facilities. Without proper planning and processes, you increase your vulnerabilities and risk potential exposures and OSHA penalties. This could also increase North Dakota's risk of a resurgence of the virus.

During this session, you will learn a three-phase approach to reopening, including:

- steps to take BEFORE employees/customers return
- processes to follow DURING the first few days of reopening
- and safety protocols for ONGOING mitigation

To assist in your planning efforts, our Safety Consultants will walk you through performing a COVID-specific hazard assessment. They'll discuss key steps to uncovering your risks and how to begin addressing the gaps you identify.

Consultants will also review the ND Department of Health's new assessment tool, breaking down the "safety speak" to simplify the terminology for those outside the safety profession.
